October 1856.

My dear George

I am writing you a small note and as I have a great many things to do I am obliged to leave it many times and off about my business; we have a dead boy onshore and it was one of my cousin; he was only about five years of age; dear George I hope you would come onshore if possible and visit us all in our new houses, we live down the pear, close the landing place therefore if you would come onshore tomorrow I shall meet you very soon, and if you do not please send me an answer, and a keep=sake, I hope you have not forgotten your likeness, if you have my dear James I shall be very much surprised, the bearer of this note will also deliver to you few bananas which I dont know whether would be of any use to you, but as I know not what to send I give them to him.

My dear James, I shall always call you James and not George, as I am very fond of the name James it was a very good name, yes, so nice. I am quite well again, but still Josiah's mark is on my forehead I shall wear it for a present. dear James, I am very much displeased on hearing that you cannot come onshore, as I would like to see you above all things. And now my dear James I must bid you good=bye. as I cannot write any more.

Believe me to be yours truly.

Miss Harriet Augusta Lewis
